FRENCH AT VERDUN HAVE TAKEN MANY IMPORTANT POINTS

Consolidate Position. While

In Three Weeks

TRENCH CAPTURED

Reply of Crown Prince Is Violent Bombardment Of Leading Lines

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, May 1.—The French Commander, utilizing the lull in the operations in the region of Verdun, is consolidating his positions by carrying out small operations, all of which have been successful, as at Avocourt, Cumieres, north of Mort Homme and Caurette Wood. Thus the Germans have lost some not unimportant points, without having made the slightest progress for three weeks.

The superiority of the French in the air also affirms itself. Yesterday, eight German aeroplanes were brought down.

The moral situation is also working. Their paper Humanite declared that they want first to bring down the German birds of prey of high lineage who are the enemies of the world's liberties.

Yesterday, the Socialists voted a resolution against the revival of internationalist relations and class hatred. They also approved of the collaboration of the syndicalists with the Government in the interest of the working-men class.

The official communique issued yesterday evening reported: West of the Meuse, there was a violent bombardment of our first and second lines at Mort Homme and north of Cumieres. The French captured a German trench with thirty prisoners.

East of the Meuse and in Woivre, the day was comparatively calm, except for the usual cannonade.

A French aeroplane attacked two Fokkers above the German lines, in the region of Roye. One of them, riddled with machine-gun fire, dropped 5,000 feet and was smashed to atoms. The other was likewise obliged to descend.

Our battle-planes brought down two other Fokkers, one south of Douaumont. Five enemy aeroplanes dropped bombs south of Verdun. Our chasers brought down two and our anti-aircraft guns accounted for a third.

London, April 30.—General Sir Douglas Haig reports the repulse of further gas and bomb attacks. The Germans unsuccessfully raided our trenches, last night, near Fricourt, while, north of Messines and Wulverghem, they liberated gas at one o'clock in the morning, on a front of 2,000 yards and followed it up with an infantry attack, which was broken up by our artillery. A hostile party which entered our trenches at one point was immediately bombed out.

Simultaneously, the enemy, following on a heavy bombardment, attacked with bombers at Hollandache Schuur. They were equally unsuccessful before our machine-gun fire.

There was active underground warfare on the Loos salient.

Kiangsu Garrison Told to Ignore 'Blandishments Of Revolutionaries'; Peking Seeks Further Armistice

Reuter's Pacific Service to The China Press

Shanghai, May 2.—In response to a message casting doubts on the cruiser Haiyung being missing, Reuter's Peking correspondent replies that the Haiyung is at Foochow and that her Captain will be court-martialled concerning the sinking of the China Merchants' s.s. Hsin-yu.

Peking, May 2.—Contrary to the reports coming from anti-Yuan sources, the attitude of Marshal Feng Kuo-chang, Governor of Kiangsu, appears to be very moderate. In a recent order to his troops, Marshal Feng Kuo-chang stated that, as they were Northern troops, their interests are bound up with those of the Central Government and he warned them against being seduced by the blandishments of the revolutionaries.

Yesterday, the various Ministries removed their offices to their old premises at the Chengshihang, in order to separate the Cabinet from the Presidential Palace. President Yuan Shih-k'ai has not attended the last two meetings of the Ministers.

It is reported that Premier Tuan Chi-jui is negotiating with the Southern leaders for an extension of the armistice for another month. The present armistice expires on the 6th of this month.

Peking Asks Longer Truce
Ostasiatische Lloyd

Peking, May 2.—The Government, through Liang Chi-chiao, has approached the southern leaders as to the prolongation of the armistice, expiring May 6, by another month. Hsiung Hsi-ling, Pacification Commissioner for Western Hunan, has arrived at Tientsin. The President has invited him to come immediately to Peking and to act as mediator between North and South.

The convocation of the Parliament is expected to take place in August. The preparations will begin next month.

Premier Tuan Chi-jui, accompanied by Lu Cheng-hsiang, Minister of Foreign Affairs, intends to officially call upon the foreign Ministers to Peking.

A military conference, in which delegates of the provinces will participate, is to be convened at an early date.

Volunteers Rout Rebels In Fight for Hancheng, Shensi

Reuter's Pacific Service to The China Press

Hoyanghsien, April 29.—It was on the 4th of April, when the first sign of a real revolutionary movement was seen in Hoyang. On that date they gathered about that city's gates up to the number of about 1,000 and there the revolutionary ensign was unfurled. After having in vain bombarded Hoyang for 7 hours they retired and commenced their move towards Hancheng, 90 li towards the north, the city of Ichuanhsien, 240 li to the north of Hancheng; having already on the 26th of March been taken by a robber band that was nearly a thousand strong and that according to arrangement should later on join hands with the revolutionaries.

It was first in Hancheng, that the leader's name was made known. It is a general belief in these regions, that a certain strong and vigorous general, who during the first revolution in this province nearly 5 years ago, was very prominent, should take the lead of this movement. And everything points to the likelihood of his intention to do so, but the timely abdication of Yuan seems to have changed his mind. Now it has leaked out, that on the date (the 4th of April) when the revolution started, the abdication of the Emperor had not been made known around here. Even we foreigners had not then received any reliable news to that effect. When it was made known and especially the effect it had on the anticipated leader it caused real consternation amongst the minor leaders and supporters of the movement.

Rebel Movement's Growth

However, the rebel movement had already got a tremendous start, because from the 6th to the 10th their number had grown to over 10,000. In Hancheng and Hoyang nearly every good mule and horse, that had not been hidden, had been taken away, so they had them in thousands.

The leader now chosen is Liu Ting-hsien, from Chencheng, Hoyanghsien. He was the first Magistrate in Hoyang in the revolution in 1911, in which he took a prominent part.

On the 12th of April the soldiers sent to the rescue of Hancheng began to arrive. But there was much talk and much fear, that those who came at first, consisting mostly of robbers, would rather join than fight the revolutionaries. While passing Hoyanghsien they indeed behaved very rudely towards the northern soldiers, who had arrived there to protect the city a few days ahead of them. They cursed the latter wherever they saw them and went in to several fights with them, although they did not stay more than half a day. It was a pleasing surprise therefore to learn that when Major Hu of the so-called "Su-ki-tul" with his not fully 200 men, amongst whom were over 30 robbers on horseback, whom he had picked up on the way to Hancheng,

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Petrograd, May 1.—With the fall of Trebizond and their hopeless situation on the Black Sea coast, the attention of the Turks has been called to the even distribution of their troops on their inland fronts. The Turkish forces freed from the necessity of a blockade of Kut-el-Amara are likely to be directed either against Kermanshah or the Suez Canal, more probably the former.

How U. S. Troops Will Fight Villa in Mexico

Photograph shows a detachment of United States Infantrymen behind a hastily constructed sandbag barricade. The sandy soil makes trench digging difficult on account of the continual sliding of the loose sand. For this reason when hasty defense works are essential the troops throw up mounds which are topped with sandbags. This affords fair security as the Mexican raiders are shy of field artillery and the soldiers use the openings between the bags as loopholes to fire through.

Coast Officers' Strike Holds Up Five Vessels Due Out of Shanghai

Guild's Confidence Increases;
Non-Members Join Protest;
Convinced of Success

The second day of the strike of officers and skippers belonging to ships of the China Navigation Company and of the Indo-China Steam Navigation Company ended yesterday in favor of the strikers. Meanwhile the shipping situation is growing more grave.

Five steamers that would have sailed were reported as held in this port yesterday because the skippers and all officers left. These steamers were: the Shansi, Shengking, Ying Chow, King Sing and Poyang. One steamer that should have left the day before still swung idly at her cables.

There is a growing feeling of confidence among members of the China Coast Officers' Guild who have called the strike. One factor in causing this is the action of non-members of the Guild. It is claimed that the organization composes all the officers in the two companies except 15. There was a good deal of doubt before the final step was taken as to the attitude of these officers.

Non-Members Join Strike
It was said at Guild headquarters yesterday that non-members of the Guild were in many cases working with their "brother officers." In one case an officer who did not belong to the Guild refused to move his ship, and in several others they have left their steamers.

"These men realize," said a guild official yesterday, "that if we win the strike they'll probably lose their jobs as one condition of our coming back. Therefore they feel that it is to their interest to act with their fellow officers."

"Did the officers in the Guild all walk out?" he was asked.

"To a man," was the emphatic answer.

The officers are confident of a successful end for the strike. If any of them weakened they didn't show it yesterday. Guild headquarters was a busy place. Men were going and coming and wires were being received from ports along the coast that officers with ships at sea were taking them to

Irish Uprising Is Quashed; Rebels Give In Everywhere

Entire Dublin Commando Surrenders; Leaders Include
Countess Murkiewicz; Patriotic Meeting Here

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Peking, April 2.—The following official telegram from the Foreign Office, dated May 1, has been handed to Reuter's Agency by the British Legation: "The General Officer Commanding-in-Chief the Irish Command reports that all the Dublin commandos have surrendered."

London, April 30.—Official: The Commander in Ireland reports that the situation in Dublin is much more satisfactory. Last night, the leader of the rebels in Dublin sent messengers, ordering the rebels in the counties of Galway, Clare, Wexford, Louth and Dublin to surrender.

The rebels in four areas in Dublin are surrendering freely. Up to the present, 707 prisoners have been taken.

A column of infantry, cavalry and artillery has been sent to engage the rebels at Enniscorthy, where the rebel leaders have doubts concerning the message from Dublin.

London, May 1.—The Dublin communique today sounds the death-knell of the Irish rising. Particularly significant is the passage reporting the wholesale surrenders in Central Dublin, which is the center of the whole movement.

The soldiers in these positions, in consequence of looting, were furnished with supplies for months. Priests and police are doing their utmost to disseminate the knowledge of these surrenders, which will have the most salutary effect when it is known that the rebel citadel is tottering.

The rebels continue wantonly to burn the property in Sackville Street, but the fire brigade is now able to resume work.

The persons arrested include the notorious agitator, Countess Murkiewicz.

The rebel commander at Enniscorthy has left for Dublin, under escort, to convince himself of the surrenders in Dublin on the spot. Meantime, a truce exists. Another deputation from Ashbourne, in Meath, is also proceeding to Dublin.

Reports that all is quiet have been received from all other possible storm centers, including New Ross, Wicklow and Bagnalstown. The rebels at Galway are reported to be disbanding. A few arrests have been made.

Shanghai Irish Condemn Sinn Feiners' Rebellion

If there is a Sinn Feiner in Shanghai, he certainly was not at the meeting of Irishmen at the Palace Hotel, yesterday, called by the local St. Patrick's Society. If he had been, no-one would have denied that at least he possessed courage.

Irishmen are not shy in any way and this gathering made no mistake as to its feelings. Every patriotic sentiment to which Mr. Simms alluded in a stirring speech was vigorously applauded and there was a great outburst when he proposed and Brother Faust seconded the following resolution:

"That we Irishmen in China look upon the disloyal action of a few of our compatriots with shame and Miss Clarice Veisben, No. 6, Quinsan Road, shot in side, will recover.

Mr. A. Aguilar, shot through left arm and wrist.
Chinese police constable, shot through forearm.
Two Japanese women, slightly wounded, will recover.
The Chapel policeman who did the shooting; said to be shot three times and to be mortally wounded.
One Chinese, shot through hip and spine broken, probably will die.
Two Chinese men, one shot through leg and another through shoulder, will recover.
One Chinese girl, slight flesh wound on back.

Four persons were killed and ten wounded in the Settlement last night by a Chinese policeman from the station in Chapel. The man is said to have gone off his head and to have been seized with a mania for murder.

The shooting occurred about 7.10 o'clock on the North Szechuen Road Extension, at Helen Terrace.

After a battle in the streets, the man said to have done the shooting was mortally wounded by a foreign sergeant. The police did not capture him then, but he was later found in the Red Cross Hospital in Peking Road. His comrades are supposed to have carried him there after he had received his wounds. At a late hour last night it was said that he probably would die.

The man is shot four times. There are bullet wounds through his chest, an arm, a leg and there is a fourth wound in the head.

Sergt. Elliot Wounds Madman
Sergeant Elliot of the North Szechuen Road Police station brought the murderer to earth with one shot. He is supposed to have fired the other shots that hit the man also.

When the alarm was first given, Sgt. Elliot and Foreign Constable Village ran out to investigate. The scene of the shooting is but two blocks from their station. When they approached the policeman, Village was ahead. The foreign officers had assumed that the shooting was being done by robbers. Village ran up to the maniac and asked, "Where are the robbers?" For answer the murderer thrust out his rifle and fired at the constable but missed.

Elliot was behind Village. He opened fire immediately on the Chinese and brought the man down.

It was reported that other Chinese police from the Chapel station were also firing shots. It was said by one witness that other police seeing their comrade shooting, lost their heads and began firing also. It was apparent that they fired at everything that moved. The murders were senseless and without regard to nationality. They murdered a small Chinese girl student, then a Japanese and after that a Chinese postman. Shot When Seeking Refuge

One of those killed was a Portuguese who was followed into a shop where he had taken refuge and shot down. Miss Clarice Velsben was passing down the street with Mr. C. H. Williams of the American Consulate when the firing began. She took refuge in a shop and was struck in the side by a bullet aimed at Mr. Williams. Her wound was slight and she was allowed to go home after it had been dressed at the General Hospital.

Besides the man who started the riot, a Chinese who was taken to St. Luke's hospital is expected to die of his wounds.

The district was in an uproar after the shooting had been stopped. Some Japanese Boy Scouts who were passing tried to make their way to the station where the Chinese policeman had come from. A shot fired over their heads scattered them. There was considerable talk that the Japanese were going to arm and attack the police station but this threat did not materialize.

S.V.C. Called Out

As a result of the riot the Shanghai Scottish S. V. C. were called out and held in readiness at the Hongkew police station. The Japanese company was also called out. At midnight there was no indication of further trouble.

The North Szechuen Road at this point is in the Settlement, but the territory on each side of the road is Chinese. The presence of these policemen with their rifles and bayonets is always evident in the alleyways along the North Szechuen Road.

A graphic account of the riot is given by Mr. C. E. Tyreman of No. 32 Helen Terrace.

"I was coming south on the North Szechuen Road about 7.10" he said, "when I heard a shot followed by police whistles. I looked toward the mouth of Helen Terrace and as I did so I saw a Chinese Constable of the Settlement. He came running out of the terrace holding his left arm and I could see that he was wounded."

"The man hurried to the North Szechuen Road station and gave the alarm. Immediately afterward Sgt. Elliot and P. C. Village came running down the street. I followed them."

"As I passed a little florist's shop opposite the side door of No. 1 Helen Terrace I saw a Chinese postman lying against the side of the kerb, dead. He had been shot in the side. The man had been on his bicycle and toppled over after he was shot. One leg was still over the saddle of the bicycle."

Police Exchange Shots

"The officers ran on and came up to the Chinese policeman at Mag-nolia Terrace. I watched from behind a richia while they exchanged shots and the man who started the shooting fell over. There was still firing to be heard after that. I couldn't tell whether it was other Chapel policemen or whether the wounded man had crawled behind the bamboo fence that runs along the street at this point and was still using his rifle."

"After that I started for home. It was dark down the Terrace. Just before I got to my door my foot struck something soft. I put out a hand and discovered that it was a body."

"It was that of the Chinese girl. She was well dressed and evidently of good family. She had been shot through the mouth and was dying when I found her. I carried her into my house and she died there soon afterward. She appeared to be about 16 years old."

It was said that this girl was a Miss Ting and that she had been to visit a missionary friend who lives in the Terrace. She is believed to be of excellent family and has a brother who is a graduate of Harvard.

Chinese Constable's Bravery

This girl was the first one shot. One of the strongest arguments in favor of the theory that the Chapel officer became insane was the wanton killing of this child. At the sound of the firing a Chinese Constable of the Settlement ran down the terrace and grappled with the murderer though he himself was without firearms.

He was shot through the arm for his bravery. In the darkness he could not distinguish the uniform of the Chapel man and assumed that only a robber could act this way. He so reported to the white officers at the station, who charged out to attack the killer.

After shooting the girl and the constable, the Chapel man ran out of the mouth of the Terrace onto the Settlement road. His rifle was held ready and from the evidence of witnesses he shot thereafter at everything he saw move.

"A Chinese postman had delivered a letter at the side of No. 1 Helen Terrace," said one man who watched the tragedies from a window. "The postman mounted his bicycle and started off as the Chapel policeman ran out. The murderer thrust his rifle into the postman's side and pulled the trigger."

"The postman's wheel wobbled and he tumbled over. He must have been killed instantly as he made no sound and did not move after that."

Murders Follow Quickly

It is impossible to determine the order of the murders that followed so swiftly upon each other.

Mr. J. M. Machado, Mr. A. Aguilar and Mr. F. Gutierrez were coming north along the road. They heard the firing and saw the madman approaching. They ran for safety into a small Chinese jeweller's shop but the man followed. As they crouched behind whatever cover they could find, the Chinese fired at them as rapidly as he could load. Mr. Machado was hit in the side and chest. He died later at the General Hospital. Mr. Aguilar was shot through the left arm and wrist. By some miracle Mr. Gutierrez was not hit.

The madman must have believed that he had killed everyone in the shop as he ran again into the street.

One of the strangest of the many tragedies was the murder of the Japanese.

He is a well-to-do merchant of Nanking Road. It happened at the time that he was passing in a richia. The madman aimed at the richia coolie but the coolie saw him and fell forward. As he did so the killer fired and the Japanese in the richia seat fell over dead.

Mr. Williams' Escape

When the firing began Mr. C. H. Williams, of the American Consulate, was going down the street with Miss Clarice Velsben. Seeing the danger Mr. Williams put his companion into a shop and stood before the door. The madman fired at him, but missed and the bullet struck Miss Velsben in the side. Her wound is not considered dangerous.

Passing trams were fired on and their occupants wounded.

A small Chinese girl who scuttled across the street to where her mother was fired at. The bullet struck her back. Chinese on the sidewalk and in trams were shot in rapid succession. All the Chinese injured were taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

An indication that there were other Chapel police concerned in the shooting is the fact that though the madman was shot four times he was able temporarily to escape. It is assumed that he could not have done this without aid.

Buckshot Mystery

Another curious incident of the affair is the wound that one of the Chinese taken to St. Luke's had received. The Chapel policeman was firing the regulation rifle. But this particular patient was wounded in the calf of one leg with buckshot. The doctor that picked the missiles out evolved a theory as he did so:

"It must have been this way," he said, "Everybody about the place was in a high state of excitement as a result of the firing. Some good householder took down his old blunderbuss and sneaked out to get a shot at the robbers, as he supposed. This coolie passed at the time and received the shot gun charge in his leg."

Immediate inquiries were made by police officials of the Settlement who visited the Chapel police station. They were told that the murderer had been taken to the Red Cross hospital. They were careful to see that the man was in a condition that made escape impossible before they rested for the night.

port for internment. Officers who had left their cabins were inquiring about rates and accommodation at the Strike Mess at No. 16 Seward Road.

The guild has taken a house there where skippers and officers get room and lodging almost at cost. This discourages those who otherwise might be inclined to hit it up a bit during their term of idleness. The Guild officials say that they have plenty of money—but they want to guard against wasting it.

Many Boats Laying Up

The Hsin Peking rocked lastly at her anchorage alongside the French Bund yesterday. She was to have sailed at 4.30 on Monday. One officer reported to his comrades:

"Cowboys are forming between the steamer and her float."

All day yesterday the Guild was receiving word that steamers were putting into ports according to the understanding that the officers had when they left. The following wire was received at strike headquarters from Hankow:

"All members here, except one, stand by the action of the Guild."

In Hankow according to another telegram the following steamers have interned: Tuckwo, Siangtang, Tatung, Tungting, Kutwo, and Luenyi. Word was received that the Chungking had gone in and tied up at Antung. A Bangkok despatch said that the Changchow had been laid up there and another from Tientsin declared that the Singan and Hui-chow had been brought in there.

It is pointed out that the tie-up of the China Navigation steamers is practically complete. The Tungchow is being allowed to proceed to Shanghai because she has French troops from Tientsin on board. In accordance with the word pledge by the guild that nothing would be done to injure British trade or business, that the British government might be interested in, the officers of the steamers have been instructed to come direct to Shanghai and not to make the usual stop at Chefoo. horror." This was carried unanimously and the members were equally strong in support of an addition proposed by Mr. Maguire, which urged the immediate execution of every rebel, high or low, but the chairman said he thought it could be left to the Government to "do the right thing."

Saving when that splendid regiment, the Inniskillings, was in China on guard duty, it was easily the biggest gathering of Irishmen there has ever been in the country. There were ninety altogether.

Mr. H. G. Simms Speaks

The meeting was presided over by Mr. H. G. Simms, president of St. Patrick's Society, who said: "At our annual general meeting, held recently, I voiced the sentiments of the members of this society when can be really happy if any of its members are ailing. Sound health in a family is a boon priceless beyond words, and without it, success and felicity are practically impossible. Much illness is positively unnecessary and is occasioned chiefly by neglect. Much anxiety given on this account to near and dear ones is, therefore, avoidable. It is of the utmost importance that a reliable remedy should always be at hand to relieve the earliest symptoms of indisposition. There is yet another point that you should mark on the tablet of your memory. I expressed the hope that the difference of opinion on local politics in Ireland would, in these days, be seen in their true perspective and I pointed out that such differences were of little or no consequence as long as our empire was threatened by a foreign enemy.

"All true Irishmen recognise that their interests are bound up with the British empire and any failure on the part of the empire to bring this war to a successful conclusion means disaster for Ireland. Our message to Ireland at the time was to urge her to prosecute this war with determination in so far as it lay in her power to do so. It is, therefore, all the more humiliating to know that there is still a small minority in our country who are traitors to Ireland's best interests, traitors to the empire from which we derive our safety and our very existence, traitors to the cause of right as opposed to brute force, traitors to our allies and, finally, traitors to Ireland's own sons who are fighting at the front and whom these people have stabbed in the back."

Sinn Fein Unrepresentative

"The prospect of a united Ireland and of a people at peace with one another has received a rude shock at the hands of the members of a society with the fantastic and ludicrous appellation of 'Sinn Fein'—meaning 'ourselves alone'—irresponsible and unrepresentative of all that stands for the welfare of our country, a society which has not hesitated to have dealings with our enemies and which has listened to their poisonous and lying propaganda."

"We are met here today to express our horror and detestation of these people, who have done us such a disservice and to express the hope that the Government will bring home to their leaders the enormity of their offences and mete out to them the just punishment which they so richly deserve and thus, once and for all, rid Ireland of these rebellious agitators whose interests are foreign to those of the large majority of the Irish people and whose one desire is to injure the empire, even at the cost of wrecking Ireland."

He concluded by moving the resolution, which Brother Faust seconded with a brief speech, saying that he was sure he voiced the opinion of all present when he said that they executed the conduct of the rebels, which had done the greatest harm—or had attempted to do it—to Ireland. However, it was his hope that, out of all the trouble, would come good, because it would show the solidarity of Irishmen in their determination to do their duty.

Irish Here United

The chairman said that it was desired to cover all the ground and make it evident that the expression came from all Irishmen in China, therefore the resolution would be cabled to both Mr. John Redmond and Sir Edward Carson.

Mr. C. R. Maguire: "I should like to make the addition that the British Government be urged to utilise all their military, police and civil power to bring everyone, high or low, connected with this traitorous movement to justice as rapidly as possible. Let no shade of politics or sentiment interfere in any way with the speedy execution of all associated with it."

"The movement is traitorous not only to Irishmen here and in other parts of the world, but to all those who have sacrificed their lives for the safety of an empire which Ireland more than anyone has done so much to build up; traitorous to the civilisation which our patron saint, St. Patrick, was one of the pioneers in establishing throughout the world; traitorous to the mothers and children of those who are laying down their lives at the present time for that little bit of flag that flutters now and again over our consulate and other buildings and is occasionally seen associated with the green flag of St. Patrick at our club gatherings."

"Traitors to that flag deserve the severest punishment that can be brought upon anyone who assists in the tremendous movement of that traitorous country, Germany, which is a traitor to civilisation. Sinn Fein has done more to help on the cause of that country than any victory the Germans can ever gain."

The chairman: "We think it can be safely left to the Government to deal with these people. Volunteers from north, south, east and west in Ireland have flocked to help the Government to deal with them and the latest telegrams show that the situation is very well in hand—in fact, these rebellious people have been firmly dealt with and have practically surrendered. I think we can leave the handling of these people in the hands of the Government."

"I wish to thank all those Irishmen who are not members of our society who have attended here to show their feelings and I hope that, now they have come in amongst us, they will see their way to join our society, which is a very strong one." The meeting wound up with congratulations to Mr. Simms on recovering from his recent illness.

My Dear Sir,

I know it is my business to extol Dunlop Motor Cycle Covers, but I happen to know what I am talking about and to believe what I say, and since you ask me to tell you briefly if and why I really think Dunlops are the best, I would say that—

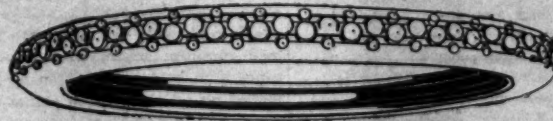

(1) Dunlop casing, owing to the special design and quality of the canvas and the way in which it is built up, besides being particularly resilient, heats less and lasts longer than any other casing.

(2) The black rubber mixing constituting the tread is extraordinarily tough and long-suffering, and one of the most fortunate discoveries of our laboratory staff.

(3) The tread design (a patent) is a really scientific and most successful nonskid device.

Here is perhaps enough to go on with, but if you want me to elaborate these points and add some others, I can do so. Meanwhile I hope you will consider the reputation of the Company, plus what I have told you, sufficient to give the covers a trial. Let me know how you get on.

Yours faithfully,

Austrians and Germans Fight During Retreat from Pinsk

Former Object to Acting as Rear-Guard; Sanguinary Encounter Is Only Terminated by a Ruse

(Reuter's Agency War Service)
Petrograd, April 30.—An official communique reports that, in a battle on the Ikva, we captured 22 Austrian officers and 600 men and recaptured some lost trenches full of Austrian dead.

The enemy's forces being compelled to retire from the Pinsk region, owing to the floods, the Germans began to depart, leaving the Austrians as a rear-guard. This customary procedure aroused the Austrians, who attacked the Germans, a bloody hand-to-hand fight ensuing.

The methods of the Germans to quell the trouble increased the casualties, especially among the Austrians. Eventually, the German Staff had to adopt the ruse of a furious bombardment, pretending that the Russians were attacking, in order to terminate the fight.

London, April 30.—The principal fighting on the Russian front has been in the region of Lake Narotch, where the Germans attacked in massed formation, in order to retake a few trenches. A very fierce engagement is proceeding in the adjoining villages.

Peking, April 29.—The following official communique from Petrograd, dated April 28, has been handed to Reuter's Agency by the Russian Legation:—The enemy are continuing to bombard the Ikakul bridge-head. At many points along the River Dvina, enemy aeroplanes appeared and dropped bombs.

Yesterday, seven enemy aeroplanes flew over the Dvinsk region. One of them had our identification marks.

Our airmen raided the German rear positions. The aeroplane Ila Murometz shelled the station of Daulzeve, south-east of Friedrichstadt, where thirteen 36-pound bombs and seven others were dropped. The bombs caused a fire at the station of Ujvertin.

During the night of April 26, the enemy, after a two hours' bombardment, assumed the offensive on the sector Vlas-Kronin, north-east of Baranovich. Our vanguard and scouts opened fire and repulsed the attack.

At dawn, it was noticed that the enemy were again gathering in front of this same sector. They were dispersed by our fire.

The enemy's artillery was especially active in the region of the Oginsky Canal and the River Jasel-da. The enemy's aeroplanes dropped bombs on many points of the positions held by the troops of General Evert.

We stormed the village of Kromia-kov, on the Rovno-Kovel railway. The enemy attempted to recapture the village, but were driven back by our fire.

The Turkish front.—Vanguard actions are taking place in the Mamahatun and Mush regions. South of Bitlis, our troops have driven the Turks away from a series of positions in the mountains.

Later.—We have further slightly advanced in the region of the village of Glinovka, west of Dvinsk. North of Lake Drisviaty, our artillery brought down an enemy aeroplane, which fell behind the enemy's lines. Enemy aeroplanes, in the region of the village of Ostrovki, south-east of Stolbe, dropped thirty bombs, which killed several Austrian prisoners.

In the region of the River Strypa, south-west of Tarnopol, our troops, having approached some Austrian working parties, unperceived, on the height east of Bogatkovze, charged them with the bayonet. Having rushed the enemy's trenches, they bayoneted part of the occupants in a short hand-to-hand fight and captured one officer and 52 men. Our troops retired, after damaging the enemy's works.

About 5 a.m., the enemy, in turn, assumed the offensive in this region, but were put to flight by our fire and counter-attack. We further captured six able-bodied and twenty wounded Austrians, also 111 rifles, two cases of hand-grenades and a quantity of raw material.

The Turkish front.—Our troops have pressed back the enemy south-west of the Erzeroum region. In the region of Bitlis, our troops have further advanced southwards.

N.Y.K. SOON TO HAVE 9 LARGE NEW VESSELS

Will Then Possess 101 Ships With a Tonnage Of 484,800

Tokio, April 29.—The N.Y.K. has now 92 vessels with a total tonnage of 430,000, although the Yamaka Maru, 11,900 tons, and the Takata Maru, 7,500 tons, have been lost. The fleet will be increased shortly by the addition of nine new vessels with a total tonnage of 54,800, which will be launched or placed in service this year. The company has now under construction three ships of 7,500 tons each, three of 7,300 tons each, two of 7,400 tons each and one of 80,000 tons. At the end of this year the company will have 101 vessels with a total tonnage of 484,800.

REPUBLIC IS FAVORED IN YENCHENG, HONAN

Nevertheless Recruiting for The Northern Army Is Lively Owing to Tempting Pay

Special Correspondence of The China Press

Yencheng, Honan, April 27.—While other parts of China are very much stirred up over the politics of the nation, this part of Honan is utterly quiet. Nevertheless, there is a very discernible satisfaction over the fact that the "Republic" is being continued, and while, to judge from the present opinion here, Honan would never side actively with the South-erners, yet there is just enough dissatisfaction to make the people only too pleased that all is not perfectly smooth for those who disbelieve in "government by the people."

This might seem to be contradicted by the fact that recruiting of soldiers is being carried on rather extensively and is meeting with enlistments that would indeed be cheering in lands where measures for compulsion are being discussed.

Not only in Yencheng, but in Siping as well, there are daily substantial additions to the soldiery, but I understand that the pay is just enough to prove tempting to the people who otherwise might not be able to exist nearly so easily—for after their food has been paid for, there will be left nearly as much as could be earned by daily labor.

Hence no indication of the opinion of the people on the present crisis is indicated by the enlistments. On the other hand, nowhere have I been able to observe any enmity towards the Republican cause, which is in contrast with the guarded criticisms that are frequently heard regarding the course of the powers that are seeking to crush the independent provinces.

AUSTRIANS EVACUATE POSITIONS AT MLYNOV

Driven Out By Superior Forces Two Days After Gaining Them From Russians

(Ostasiatische Lloyd War Service)

Official Austro-Hungarian report. Vienna, April 30.—Russian theater.—Austro-Hungarian advance detachments have withdrawn, before superior Russian vanguard attacks, from the positions which they conquered on the 28th, north of Mlynov. The number of prisoners reported yesterday has increased to more than two hundred.

Italian theater.—Artillery duels, as usual, took place at several places on the Italian front. Goerz was again shelled.

Austro-Hungarian flyers threw bombs on the barracks and camps near Villa Vicentina. All the aeroplanes returned unharmed, after a successful aerial engagement.

An Austro-Hungarian aviator, near San Daniele, in Friuli, fought four hostile aeroplanes and forced one of them down in precipitate flight.

Italian detachments advancing from Dossio-di-Genova attacked the Austro-Hungarian positions in the region of Adamello, on the top of the Tonale Pass.

A report of the Italian press of April 28 contains the absolutely free invention assertion that the Austro-Hungarian infantry "increasingly" uses explosive bullets. It is stated that the violations of international law, the use of explosive bullets and gas-grenades, the bombardment of churches and convents, which are distinctly marked as such, are far too numerous to be mentioned.

Berlin, April 30.—The Deutscher Ueberseesender states: The Kaiser Wilhelm Scientific Institute held its annual meeting and, at the same time, inaugurated its new branch for biology at Dahlem, near Berlin. Professor Dr. Harnack, in his inaugural speech, stated that the paramount task for the coming German evolution will be the reconciliation of individual rights with the necessary public administration of the institutions of national interest, in order to maintain the balance between individual and collective responsibilities.

The German loan banks have published their report for 1915. The maximum limit of emissions was fixed by law at 3,000 million Marks at the beginning of the war, but only during three days had the amount of 2,000 million Marks been exceeded. The highest level was reached with 2,348 million Marks on December 31, 1915, the lowest with 665 million Marks on February 15. The principal borrowers were the municipalities, which required large sums, owing to war necessities.

The newspapers, in reply to the Russian complaints about the prisoners' camp at Heuberg, publish a statement made to the commander of the camp by the Danish Captain, von Spaeth, who visited the camp together with the Russian Red Cross sister Samsonova. The Captain said: "I feel obliged to express my thanks for the excellent treatment given to the men in this camp. I have heard much of it from all sides and now express my thanks after my own observation." The Captain and the Sister conversed with the prisoners without any Germans being present.

President Havenstein, of the Reichsbank, reported at the central committee meeting on the fourth German war loan. He stated that the number of subscriptions was 1,200,000 to the first war loan and 5,300,000 to the fourth war loan. The number of subscriptions below two thousand Marks rose from 900,000 to nearly five million.

The pupils of 500 high schools subscribed forty-seven million; the pupils of 680 boys schools seventeen million; the pupils of 311 Berlin common schools one million. President Havenstein further called attention to the decreasing role played by the loan banks.

On the first date of the instalments, 22% of the payments were made with the aid of the loan banks; on the second 8 1/4%; on the third 6 1/4% and on the fourth only 3 1/4-5%. Of the total amount subscribed at the first date of the instalments, instead of the obligatory 30% there was paid: Of the 1st war loan 62 1/4%, the second 67%, the third 74 1/2-5% and the 4th 76%. Up to April 27th, of the third war loan 8,348 million Marks had been paid in, of which only 396 million had been loaned by the loan banks.

How Kiangyin Forts Were Re-taken By Government Forces

So-Called Independents Straggle Back and Surrender; Two Hour Battle

Special Correspondence of The China Press

Kiangyin, April 27.—The Kiangyin Forts are again flying the red flag of loyalty to the government this morning. The short regime of the Independents ended in disaster. For ten days they ruled the county to the disgust of the substantial citizens, and to their own financial advantage. After the attack on Wush last Sunday night, bodies of the defeated troops straggled back to Kiangyin for two days. Most of them were thoroughly dispirited, and many voluntarily surrendered to their former commander General Fong, who was in charge of the force of about 600 loyal troops with whom he left Kiangyin when independence was declared.

On Monday a body of about ten professional agitators (including one Japanese!) arrived at the forts from Shanghai, and from that time all discipline was demoralized. The leading citizens of the city of Kiangyin made every effort to secure a surrender of the forts without fighting with General Fong's troops. A deputation went out to his camp and secured from him most liberal terms, including full pardon and reinstatement for all officers and men and pay for every gun surrendered. After some parley the Independent leaders agreed to these terms, and at midnight Tuesday a letter, endorsed with the Magistrate's seal, was sent out to General Fong's camp, offering to surrender next morning at ten o'clock.

Before daylight however the agitators had persuaded the soldiers to go back on their promise, they drove the Independent leader, Siao, out of camp, imprisoned the Chief of the artillerymen who refused to retract his promise to surrender, and took matters in their own hands. Next morning they sent a demand to the city for $100,000, threatening to turn the guns of the forts on the city if it was not promptly paid. They would probably have done so had not the artillerymen adhered firmly to their refusal to handle the guns.

About noon General Fong advanced from the west along the bank of the Yangtze River to attack the Independents, entrenched in the forts. When his force appeared the artillerymen were forced by threats against their lives to man the guns. The battle was opened by two shots from the big twelve inch guns on the forts, after which there was a lull of about half an hour before the fighting began in earnest. The attacking force had only rifles and small field guns, but they advanced, with such caution, making use of cover, that the heavy fort guns could be used with little effect.

In all ten shots were fired from the big guns, none of which did any serious damage. It is commonly said that the artillerymen, forced to fight against their will, purposely aimed the guns high. One such shell fired over the heads of a small body of men who slipped around the southern side of the city and advanced along the east wall, burst dangerously near the Girls' School of the Presbyterian Mission, and another, on about the same line, passed over well up in the air.

For about two hours the fighting was quite fierce. At four p.m. the red flag was run up over the west fort, and by five p.m. the whole forts had been taken. The main body of the Independents attempted to escape in two large junks across the Yangtze River, one of which was sunk by a shot from a Chinese cruiser, drowning its occupants. A small body of less than a hundred escaped to the east overland, robbing and shooting the country people as they went.

General Fong had about six hundred soldiers, of whom forty were killed in the assault. The number of the Independents in the forts is variously estimated at from two to five hundred. When asked what had become of the killed and wounded of the Independents, a soldier replied that they had been given "private burial" together in the Yangtze!

The country is quiet again this morning, after a week of intense excitement. People are returning to their homes, and business is being resumed.

BIGGEST NAVY WOULD COST U.S. $1,500,000,000

New Ships Planned By The General Board Will Require This Sum

Washington, March 8.—Approximately $1,500,000,000 (gold) for new ships and an annual upkeep charge of $750,000,000 is what Admiral Fletcher, commanding the Atlantic Fleet, estimates it would cost to carry out the Navy General Board's recommendation. This recommendation is that the American Navy should equal the most powerful fleet afloat by not later than 1925. The Admiral's estimate was given today in testimony before the House Naval Committee. Representative Callaway, who brought out the statement, called attention to published reports that Great Britain had added nearly a million tons to her fighting ships since the war began. He asked if the situation was not "hopeless."

Admiral Fletcher thought not, adding that, judging by its great wealth, the United States could well afford to give its interests the same protection that other nations thought necessary.

Representative Callaway questioned if it was not reasonable to assume that the European war would end within a year or a year and a half at most. Admiral Fletcher thought it would. He added he believed the close of the war would see the greatest opportunity in history for the success of an international disarmament or limitation of armament agreement. He insisted, however, that the United States could not afford to put off its navy building on that account. Representative Oliver asked if anything had developed within the last two years to shake Admiral Fletcher's faith in heavy armored ships as the main strength of a navy. He wanted to know particularly whether high explosive shells had made armor less trustworthy. "There has been no development in high explosive shells worth mentioning in that time," Admiral Fletcher replied.

Representative Callaway took the witness through a number of hypothetical naval engagements to support his contention that battleships in the presence of submarines, mines and torpedoes, no longer can fight in fleets. Admiral Fletcher disagreed and resorted to paper and pencil to map out the operations of two hostile fleets under the conditions set.

Rear Admiral Taylor, chief of the Bureau of Construction, and Griffin, chief of Steam Engineering, explained to the committee the situation as to the two fleet submarines authorized last year.

Admiral Taylor said one bidder who wants to build the vessels would guarantee a 19-knot surface speed, but not the 20 knots specified. Both he and Admiral Fletcher recommended that the 19-knot proposal be accepted.

Admiral Taylor recommended that three 800-ton boats be ordered as experiments, ordinary conditions of construction to be set aside to produce them in the shortest possible time. The committee reached no decision on the question.

Mr. Blom Describes
New Shove-Dredgers;
Suitable for Shanghai

Probably Will Be Necessary Here as Trade Asks For More Room

Mr. F. J. Blom, C. E., yesterday afternoon before the Engineering Society of China read a paper on the subject of "Dredgers and Dredging." Mr. Blom who was Technical Manager of the Netherlands Harbor Works Co., in Shanghai for three years, may be considered to be an expert on this subject. During his recent visit to Holland and the dredger building yards for which Holland is famous, Mr. Blom studied the newest improvements in this line and as a result his lecture proved of unusual interest. A series of about 100 lantern slides was screened, showing the various types of dredgers.

After analyzing the sort of work to be executed by dredgers, the nature of the river or sea bed and the sites to be dredged, the different forms of dredgers necessary for each sort of soil were described. The speaker went on to deal with grab-dredgers, dipper-dredgers, bucket-dredgers, suction-dredgers, hopper suction-dredgers, clam-dredgers, trailing suction-dredgers, and shoving suction-dredgers. Of the latter, the newest designs for the Rio Plata River in the Argentine were described, which push the mud into the holds through a short and wide mouthpiece when slowly steaming ahead, and thus giving an hourly output never reached before by suction-dredgers.

This type was specially mentioned in connection with bar dredging for places like Shanghai, Tientsin and Newchwang, as it will probably be necessary to use this type of dredger at these places in the near future when trade asks for larger accommodation and harbor facilities than are available at present.

For the improvement of the canals and small rivers in China, several small size bucket, suction, and clam-dredgers were mentioned. After many years of practice and careful consideration, only very few building works succeeded in turning out useful types but these are most interesting in construction. Dealing with the needs of China, Mr. Blom gave it as his opinion that Chinese yards, now trying to construct dredgers, are on the wrong track in not making use of the vast experience gathered by Western countries.

It would be very useful indeed if Mr. Blom could read his paper on this subject in those places where dredging is going on and a good deal of misunderstanding would be cleared up and benefit derived by the respective towns and their trade.

Gov. Walsh on New Ideals
Of Legal Profession in U.S.

Former Chief Executive of Massachusetts Addresses
Far Eastern American Bar Association

Theiffin given by the local members of the Far Eastern American Bar Association in honor of former Governor David I. Walsh of Massachusetts at the Astor House yesterday was a success in every respect. With the exception of one member who is ill and two others who are absent from the city every local member of the Association was present.

After a substantial menu to which those present did full justice, the President, Judge Lobingier, introduced the guest of honor, remarking that one of the objects of the Association was to keep in touch with the profession in the homeland by meeting and hearing distinguished representatives thereof who should come to the Far East. The danger of losing professional connections with the home country was great and opportunities of overcoming it were to be welcomed. He felt sure that the guest of the day had a message which the members would all want to hear.

Gov. Walsh's Record
Governor Walsh was received with a hearty round of applause and began by saying that his experience at the bar had been an active and a busy one. He had commenced practice at Fitchburg, Massachusetts, where his older brother, since deceased, had begun his professional career some ten years earlier. Succeding to his brother's practice, and profiting by an enviable reputation which the latter had acquired, the future Governor soon found himself continuously engaged in the courts and it was from his experience there and not from theoretical views that he would speak.

Coming to the heart of his theme, which was "New Ideals of the Legal Profession in America," the Governor said that the lawyer was an employee and like any other must put himself in the employer's place if he would attain the highest success. This meant that the lawyer must come out of himself, must get the other man's viewpoint and cease to be self-centered. The greatest lawyers were those who served not only their clients but also the public and society and to this tendency was due much of what had been accomplished toward humanizing the law.

As an instance of this process he mentioned the Workmen's Compensation Act which was now in force in most of the States and which did away with the monstrous doctrine that a day laborer might be maimed for life, forfeit all compensation and become an object of charity if he happened to be classed as a "fellow-servant."

Workmen's Compensation
The relief of this situation was not however accomplished at once. When the Governor assumed his office Massachusetts had already enacted a so-called "Compensation Act" but the figures disclosed that the insurance companies and not the workmen were reaping the lion's share of the benefit, for out of every dollar paid up to that time the workmen received less than one-third. The Governor succeeded in securing the adoption of amendments to the law so that now they were receiving more than two-thirds.

The need of altruism on the part of the legal profession existed not alone in the bar but on the bench as well. Too often judges had been drawn from the aristocratic ranks of society with no real knowledge of the condition of its less fortunate members. This tended to make the bench unsympathetic, exclusive and not infrequently led to judicial tyranny.

The Governor spoke of overbearing treatment which used to be meted out to lawyers and litigants by such judges, who, fortunately, were much less numerous in America than formerly. The judge of the new order recognises the lawyer as a fellow officer of the court and not as an underling and the speaker was greatly pleased to note that in the Association which he was addressing the bench and the bar were working together harmoniously.

Tribute to Brandeis
The Governor is well acquainted with Louis Brandeis of the Boston bar whom President Wilson has nominated for Associate Justice of the Federal Supreme Court. Mr. Brandeis, the speaker said, is an able, fearless, independent man who well deserves the title of "The People's Lawyer." Of humble origin his career has been self made and he knows and sympathizes with the masses from whom he sprung.

Before he was twenty-one years of age he was writing articles for the Harvard Law Review, one of the foremost legal publications in the country. He has attained great success at the bar and amassed considerable wealth notwithstanding which he lives very simply and gives liberally of his means to the furtherance of needed reforms, having paid $15,000 out of his own pocket toward securing State Insurance for Massachusetts which was largely brought about through his efforts. Mr. Brandeis practices Emerson's rule of "plain living and high thinking" and will be a real addition to the Supreme Court.

Governor Walsh was loudly applauded and individually congratulated at the close of his address and received a vote of thanks from the Association. A short business session was then held and Mr. Frank W. Hadley was elected to membership after which the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the President.

Gov. Walsh Tells Fuh Tan

Boys About Republicanism
Ex-Governor David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, visited Fuh Tan College, at Sincan, yesterday afternoon. He was received by a military guard of students who conducted him through the grounds. Other students went through Boy Scout drills. After an inspection of the buildings had been made, the students gathered in the auditorium where Mr. Walsh made them a short talk.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Li Tung-hui, president of the college. He spoke of the increasing friendly relations between the United States and China. Most of the teachers in China now, he said, were graduates from American universities.

Mr. Walsh spoke to the boys of republican ideals and told them how the greatest good could be derived from their education.

"Education is the one thing in life worth while," he said, "Through education different countries get to know each other and the wonders and mysteries of the world become known. In a country like yours, education means everything for the advance and progress of the nation and of the individual."

"When you say that you live in a republic it means that the poorest boy can rise to the highest honor and place in the country. That is one reason why we in the United States love our flag."

"I have been told that no people have a better reputation as students than the Chinese. To be educated means that you will be able to help others. I have contempt for the boy who gets an education from and by the sacrifice of his parents and friends and then refuses to help the uneducated thousands when he becomes a man. Every boy should leave this school determined to succeed and he should remember that he owes something to those who sent him here."

"The Chinese people are one of the great races of the earth. You should strive to make the people and the government one that can do more for mankind than others are doing."

"There is not a boy here that can't succeed. You are sure to rise to a high place if you apply yourself. No matter how dull a boy is, if he works hard and diligently he can attain honors and place for himself."

GERMANY SELLS CHILI
THREE INTERNED SHIPS

Will Be Used for Coastal Business; Negotiations With Brazil Break Down

(Reuter's Agency War Service) London, April 30.—The negotiations started by Brazil to secure three German interned liners have broken down, but Germany has now allowed Chile to take three liners for her coastal trade.

News Brevities

We have received from Messrs. Kelly and Walsh, the local agents, the 1916 edition of the Directory and Chronicle of the Far East, published annually by the Hongkong Daily Press. The work is as well got up as ever, but is considerably increased in size, earlier information being added to and brought up to date, whilst many new features have been included. The price is thirty shillings.

As a mark of respect for the late Sergt. L. A. Dufour, flags were half-masted yesterday at the Shanghai Public School, the Standard Oil Co. and the Shanghai Recreation Club.

The s.s. Khyber with the outward mail from London of April 20 arrived at Port Said on Saturday, the 29th ultimo.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hurry departed yesterday by the Sakaki Maru and the Trans-Siberian Railway for England. Mr. Hurry who is organist at the Cathedral is on well-earned long leave. The cathedral choir boys and many other friends were at the jetty.

:- Hope For The Fat :-

Says a writer in the New York Sun. I was born fat, was a fat boy, and was called "Fatty" by everybody. I lost a little as a young man, but soon got it all back with interest. I always ate all kinds of food that made for fat. My size sometimes troubled me, but I never found that "nobody loves a fat man."

Probably I would have rolled into my grave a big lump of fat if something hadn't happened. I had the grip—or believed I had until my good doctor found that I was not properly digesting sugars and starches.

He gave me some little pellets to take and also a diet list which stated just what I could eat and what I could not eat. He said he was more particular about the "don'ts" than the "coulds."

Diet! The one thing I had always fought shy of! I looked at the list and felt rebellious. But the doctor was the "boss" and he bossed the job in no uncertain terms.

Well, as there is no use in having a doctor unless you follow his advice, I got aboard the wagon and stuck to it absolutely.

The "don'ts" on the list cut off all starches, sugars and malt liquors. No more big dishes of boiled hominy and butter, rice, hot rolls, waffles and—oh pshaw! all the things that I liked most! No sugar in coffee or tea, no puddings, pies or ice cream!

But I could have butter, and cream and salad oil. Any kind of meat except liver. All sea foods. Any sort of nuts except chestnuts and peanuts—and I love peanuts.

What with gluten bread toasted and buttered, or bran bread and muffins, a little saccharine in coffee to take off the curse of bitterness, string beans, celery, spinach, asparagus, salads, cabbage, etc., I was gratified to find that to be on this diet was no "depravity," as the old dandy said.

I began to feel better, look better, and to lose fat until it became noticeable to my friends. They spoke of my improved appearance.

I weighed 236 pounds before I started the dieting, and now, two months afterward, I weigh 216 pounds and am still losing fat. Nor is my skin flabby.

The comfort of being able to stoop and pick up something from the floor and to tie my shoes without getting up puffing and red in the face is reward enough for giving up the sugars and starches. I shall never go back to my old unlimited diet, although the condition for which I was treated has disappeared, and a cancelled insurance policy has been renewed after undergoing a re-examination.

I am no longer a "fat" man—just a "big" one.

Knowing the foods that make for fat and avoiding them has now become a habit. I want fat men who dread a diet to know that this is not a course of suffering. It is worth trying.

Some time ago there was published a book giving a list of menus which it was asserted, if followed absolutely, one could eat well and heartily and still lose fat. There was a preface by a well known writer who had followed this course and fully indorsed it. He says that a fat man is a sick man, and in view of my experience I agree with him. But the fat man does not know that he is sick as long as he keeps up and going. That system cuts out all starches, sugars, alcohol and fats.

When I read the book and found that I could have no butter on my bread or cream in my coffee or oil on my salad I passed it up and decided not to sacrifice my comforts for my looks.

I have observed that a fat man when he finds that butter and oil are taken from him feels that he will either starve or be so uncomfortable that he will not diet. I have found that I have eaten them and still lost fat.

Gluten bread toasted and buttered is very palatable, with a nutty taste. Saccharine used sparingly takes the place of cane sugar, while grapefruit without sugar soon becomes preferable. Prunes cooked without sugar and baked apples help out wonderfully. Potatoes, peas, beans (string beans are permitted), beets, etc., are easily avoided.

I attended a dinner where my host, knowing that I ate only gluten bread, provided a loaf. I arrived with my pockets full of toasted gluten muffins. But bread and muffins were all eaten, because another guest was trying out the diets given in the book above referred to. He and his wife had been following the course for some time and were getting good results, but both had found that the exclusion of all fats was almost enough to cause them to give up the whole thing.

When I related my experience this gentleman immediately sallied into the butter, ate his salad with gusto and was glad! He and his wife have eaten all the butter and fats they cared to ever since. He tells me that they are reducing quite as rapidly as before.

Now, none of this is new to the medical fraternity. They know all about it, and any physician will furnish a printed diet list such as I have described. My experience may encourage some of the fat ones to obey their doctors and get rid of a lot of useless weight.

Gluten bread and muffins are easily procured from the grocer. There are concerns which bake many varieties of foods for diabetics—foods with starches eliminated—and crackers made of gluten flour and butter can be obtained. Some of the restaurants serve gluten bread, but it is safer to take some with you when dining away from home.

This road is not a hard one to travel, and the result is so very satisfactory that I am impelled to pass along what I have found to be a good thing.

There is a very fat man who rides daily on one of the suburban trains. He always has a whole seat to himself. He is asleep most of the time.

I used to be the other fat man who took up a whole seat, but now I get only my share of it.

I'm sorry for the other fellow!

Fat men, get on a diet and be healthier and happier!

What England Pays

what was printed on the faces of these three squares for passers-by to read.

So, when my tea was served, I asked about them, and my hostess brought them for me to see. In the center of each was a scarlet emblem, and below there was printed the fact that from this house a man had gone out to fight for his country and his King. On one of them, below the black letters, the name of a boy, with his age, had been printed with ink.

My hostess, with her hands folded under her white apron, stood beside me while I looked at them. "I've three sons fighting," she said, and told me the names of their regiments and how long they had served. "It's the War Office, I'm thinking," that sends these cards to you, and there's not a house for five miles along this road," she said, "which 'n' not one of these."

Then I wanted to ask her why, on one of the cards, the name had been printed in ink. But I was afraid to ask.

But she told me. "My youngest boy was at Ypres," she said. "That's his name, there. I wrote it in there when the letter came from his captain.

His captain said my lad 'ad been all he should 'a' been. Said I'd reason to be proud of 'im."

Then she brought me the captain's letter. It was written in a big, boyish scrawl and it said that Lance-Corporal Joseph Harley had been killed while he was helping his wounded captain to get out from under fire. Therefore the captain was writing to Joseph Harley's mother to tell her that he owed his life to her son. It was a wonderful letter.

And yet when I had come into the Magpie Inn I had thought in my great ignorance that the war had not set its black mark on the wide, sunny fields and the thatched houses that lay on either side of the white cross-roads.

"But," Mrs. Harley said, "it's not for us to be grievin'. My other two boys is out in Egypt, and they'll be comin' home soon. An' the war'll be over. I don't want 'em comin' 'ome to a black house. I want 'em to see what we've been doin' 'ere. For we've been doin' our bit." And she told me how her neighbor's house had been converted into a home for convalescent soldiers and how each and every person in the community contributed whatever they could toward the maintenance of it.

"It's not much we can be givin'," she said. This was what she told me; this mother who had given three sons to the war.

Then she took me out through the low doorway of the kitchen and into a little paved walk which was covered over with a roof of vines. And there I saw the most remarkable thing of all. For there in a big cage was a magpie, and he was not at all like the painted magpie on the sign. He was instead very sleek and brilliant, with clear markings of white. He was also friendly. For he took a bit of wood from the bars of his cage and presented it to me. And he said the only two words that he knew. He said, "Welcome home." And Mrs. Harley smiled.

But I went down the little walk thinking of the time when the two sons would return from Egypt and of the other son whose name was printed on the square of cardboard. And I was glad beyond measure that I had come to tea in the kitchen with its high settle. For I had found, where I had least hoped to find it, one great thing. Even in the fact that there was neither twine nor a paper bag for my purchase I had found it. I had seen the pride and the faith and the loyalty, with which England is fighting. I had found the price she is paying for war.

TURKISH GENERAL PAYS
TRIBUTE TO TOWNSHEND

Halil Pasha Allows Gallant
British Commander to Retain His Sword

(Ostasiatische Lloyd War Service)

May 1.—The Deutscher Ueberseedienst says: Reports from Constantinople state that the booty captured at Kut-el-Amara has not yet been counted. Among the prisoners are 4 generals, 240 British officers and 270 Indian officers. The Turkish Chief Commander, Halil Pasha, allowed General Townshend to keep his sword.

The British casualties in the battles in Mesopotamia, during the months of March and April, amount to 20,000. When flags were displayed in Constantinople, after the news of the fall of Kut-el-Amara had arrived, it was observed that several British commercial houses flew Turkish flags.

According to the Constantinople Agency Mill, General Townshend offered to surrender Kut-el-Amara with all artillery and more than one million pounds cash, on condition of being allowed to retreat with all military honors. The Turks declined, whereupon he surrendered unconditionally.

The Berlin newspapers, in discussing the military and political consequences of the fall of Kut-el-Amara, recall Mr. Asquith's announcement, several months ago, that Bagdad would soon be in British hands. They compare this with the announcement of the coming conquest of Gallipoli. The papers point out that the event will make a deep impression, not only on Mesopotamia, but also on Arabia, Persia and as far as the borders of India.

Reverse Will only Increase

Determination, Says Paris

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, May 1.—The keynote of the comment on the surrender of General Townshend's forces at Kut is struck by the Paris Temps, which says: "Great Britain accepts this check as an unfortunate event to what, after all, was considered a colonial enterprise, having only a remote connection with the real struggle on the other fronts. The magnificent resistance at Kut adds a glorious page to the military history of the Indian Army and makes still more cruel the fate of the troops which had to pass, during two months, through all the anguish of expecting deliverance."

"Our allies have proved once more that trials only strengthen their resolution. The Dublin coup, the execution of which was hastened by the Kaiser, in order to impress Washington and London, has only resulted in spurring the British to yet greater efforts. The loss of Kut will only increase their determination to assure victory by new sacrifices wherever British honor is engaged."

THE BANDMAN CO.

"Potash and Perlmutter" as presented by the Bandman Company drew another capacity audience to the Lyceum theater. The company was in better form than on Monday night and the little comedy kept the house in anything from a ripple to a gale of laughter for the full two and one half hours. Tonight, "The Only Girl," a recent London success, will be presented for the first time.

The Weather

Very variable breezes. The maximum temperature recorded yesterday was 70.2 and the minimum 50.6, the figures for the corresponding day last year being respectively 72.0 and 48.2.

Volunteers Rout
Rebels In Fight

and who had not even got uniforms, met the revolutionaries 40 li to the south of Hancheng he put up a brave and determined fight at once and drove them before him for more than 20 li and when he at dusk had taken back the town of Tschuan nearly 2,000 were on the wildest flight before him.

Major Hu's Victory

The same evening Major Hu sent word to the voluntary leaders south of Hancheng to join him that very night with as many men as they possibly could gather and to these he gave power to kill all who had joined the movement, whether on their next day's fight with them or when they returned to their respective villages.

At 7 o'clock the next morning Major Hu with a great number of volunteers attacked some walled villages on the heights east and north of the city. From these, if taken, the city could be easily attacked. The revolutionaries in the city saw this and, fearing the defeat, began at once to pour out of the city. The volunteers followed them and the volunteers proved themselves to be very brave. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the city and the heights in its immediate neighborhood were taken possession of. And for the three days past, northern troops have been arriving and are driving the revolutionaries before them in amongst the mountain roads that lead towards Ichuan, Loehuan, etc. However, it may be a trap, for the mountains are full of robber bands able to control themselves and in good fighting positions.

The local followers from Hancheng and Hoiyang mostly ran away during the fighting days in Hancheng, but the reports go to prove that a wholesale killing of them has taken place. Scarcely a man who has joined the "Kolaas" is spared, even if he did not join this movement. Thus those killed in Hancheng and Hoiyang during these last 4 or 5 days must be reckoned in thousands.

Chen Peh-sung's Timely Arrival

The famous General, Chen Peh-sung, who fought "Pehiang" so bravely on his entrance into this province, passed Chinghsien 4 days ago on his way to Hancheng. Just as he arrived, the soldiers and the police in that city were about a hundred had rebelled, and were about to ransack the city. The General gave orders to fight them at once and drove them out of the city. Having killed about 30 and wounded others, he proclaimed amnesty for the rest and took them on as his own soldiers. On the 17th inst. he reached Hancheng. That same night, 2 messengers came to him with some "terrible news," but he would not let out what it was about. That same night he ordered all his troops about 2,000 strong to return to Pucheng immediately and himself started early on the 18th, went 90 li to Hoiyang in the forenoon and from there to Chinghsien in the afternoon. The wildest rumors go as to his movements, but nothing is proved; but in my next communication I may be able to tell you.

Hunters on Sungari
Attacked by Robbers

One Killed, Another Wounded;
Russian Expedition Sent
Against Hungtutze

Reuter's Pacific Service to The China Press

Harbin, May 1.—Four railway employees who went thirty-five versts up the Sungari, in a cutter, on a shooting trip, were attacked by Hungtutze, armed with rifles. One of the sportsmen was killed and another wounded.

The three survivors finally succeeded in escaping and returning to Harbin. The Russian authorities have despatched a river cruiser and a detachment of cavalry to try to capture the robbers.

Elect Mrs. Lobingier
President of Woman's Club for This Year

Officers for the year were elected at a meeting of the American Woman's Club held at the Palace Hotel yesterday afternoon. Mrs. C. S. Lobingier was made president.

The other officers named were: Miss Jansen, Vice-president; Mrs. A. Cabeld, recording secretary; Mrs. F. B. Hudson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. L. Boynton, treasurer; Mrs. R. P. Roberts, librarian; Mrs. P. L. Bryant, chairman of literary department; Mrs. S. I. Woodbridge, chairman philanthropic department; Mrs. M. P. Walker, chairman musical committee; Mrs. J. J. Connell, chairman social committee. The directors elected were: Mrs. Thomas Sammons, Mrs. W. H. Lacy, Mrs. F. R. Raven, Mrs. William Morris.

The club has begun arrangements for the annual garden party that will be held May 27 at St. John's University. This will mark the end of the club activities for the summer. Care will be taken to make the final event in keeping with the unusually successful season that the organization has passed through.
